Sonoma Forge Partners with Littlebranch Farm, Creating Bath Vanities that Define “Rustic Luxury”

Proving that “rustic” doesn’t have to be the opposite of “luxurious,” the two companies blend their products into one-of-a-kind vanities, merging natural wood and artisanal craftsmanship

Sonoma Forge, manufacturer of luxury plumbing fixtures inspired by humble plumbing parts, has partnered with natural wood furniture maker, Littlebranch Farm. Together, they’ve created a series of bath vanities that speak to the growing “rustic luxury” design trend. Characterized by the use of natural materials to create a soothing sense of calm and serenity, the trend merges raw, organic textures with refined craftsmanship to create timeless, artisanal spaces. Likewise, the blend of Sonoma Forge’s industrial chic faucets with hand-carved salvaged wood vanities from Littlebranch Farm, reflects this concept. The result is a selection of one-of-a-kind vanities that bring a sense of warmth and grounded elegance into today’s bath interiors.

The combination of natural wood and industrial chic faucets speaks to a growing trend toward “rustic luxury”

“The perfect backdrop for Sonoma Forge’s artisanal faucets, finely crafted wood vanities from Littlebranch Farm bring the beauty and elegance of nature indoors. Each unique piece tells its own story and serves as an anchor for growing rustic luxury design concepts.”

“The fusion of forged metal and live-edge wood feels both modern and timeless,” said Kelly Maxwell, Founder of Littlebranch Farm, based in Nashville, Tennessee, noting that all of the richly grained hardwood has been salvaged from a forest cut over 65-years ago when the trees were in danger of falling on nearby homes. Rather than allow valuable redwood, American black walnut, bigleaf maple, and blackeye burl logs to waste away, LittleBranch Farm removes stumps and other usable parts of the trees, turning them into coffee tables, fireplace mantles, dining tables, desks, beds, and bathroom vanities.

“We view each wood vanity as a unique sculpture, hand-finished to highlight its natural character and imperfections,” Maxwell explains, noting that each piece takes from two days to a few weeks to make.

Similarly, the artisanal handcrafted style of both brands creates an enduring natural story that’s at home anywhere from a forest cabin to a modern metropolitan loft. The raw, organic textures of the bath vanities combine with Sonoma Forge’s hand-forged metal faucets to bring the calming allure of nature indoors. Each one blends natural charm with elegant warmth to tell its very own unique, personal story, speaking to designers, architects, and homeowners seeking the calm connection to nature that comes from such rustic simplicity.
